GOV. HILL'S FIRST MESSAGE.

HE PLACES THE CONVICT LABOR QUESTION BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE.

Should He Consider It Necessary He Will Hereafter, During the Extraordinary Session, Recommend Other Subjects for Consideration-Only Thirteen Absentee in Both Houses-The Old Officers.

ALBANY, July 17.—The Legislature began its session to-day promptly at 11 o'clock. The Assembly tucked itself away in the pretty but stuffy little Court of Appeals room, while the Senate occupied its onyx chamber as of yore.

The Lieutenant-Governor and Speaker Cole each delivered brief addresses, distinctly stating that no subjects could be touched stating that no subjects could be touched upon beside those recommended in the Governor's message.

Both expressed the hope that the session would be short, and begged that all members would employ every effort to expedite business as speedily as possible.

The roll-call revealed but thirteen absentees in the Assembly and in the Senate.

The officers of the last session were made permanent without project.

permanent without protest.

The Governor was then notified that the Legislature had been organized, and that it was prepared to transact business.

While awaiting the Governor's message the Assembly indulged in a squabble as to the suspension of certain rules.

the suspension of certain rules.

It was interrupted by the appearance of Col. Rice, the Governor's Secretary, from the Executive Chamber with the anticipated ommunication.

Here is the message:

STATE OF NEW YORK, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, ALBANY, July 17, 1888.

To the Legislature: Pursuant to the powers vested in me by section 4 of article 4 of the constitution you save been convened in extraordinary session. The first subject recommended for your consideration is the proper employment of convicts in the penal institutions of the State and the making of whatever appropriation may be necessary to prevent the prisoners remaining in idleness.

I have received from the Superintendent of State Prisons a communication relating to the condition of the prisons, a copy of which is herewith transmitted for your information.

Should I conclude it necessary, I shall hereafter during the extraordinary session recommend other subjects for your consideration.

subjects for your consideration.

The brevity of the message was a surprise to the G. O. P. leaders. The intimation that the Governor might later on suggest other subjects to be passed upon was received with the utmost apprehension by them.

They could hardly await the reading of Supt. Lathron's explanation why more money was needed lest the convicts should be locked up, before Gen. Husted and Mr. Ainsworth jumped to their feet.

The former moved to refer the message to a special committee to draft a bill for presentation to morrow morning.

Gen. Husted asked that the whole matter be tabled, his object being to submit it to a perty caucus to be held this afternoon at 4

His proposition was adopted by a strict party vote.

In the Senate, despite Senator Reilly's earnest protest, he making a brave fight to have a bill reported which would prevent convict labor from coming into competition with the honest toiler, the message was laid upon the table until the Republicans should be given a chance to cancus.

Senator Murphy, however, secured the adoption of a resolution that the State Prisons Committee should report a bill tomorrow morning.

RUSSIAN ARMS OPEN TO WILLIAM. Preparations for Welcoming the Germa

Emperor at St. Petersburg. [BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION,] St. Petersburg, July 17 .- All Russia is looking with most friendly feelings to the coming of the German Emperor. No visit of a foreign potentate within the present generation has been more popular.

There is no drawback of hesitation or distrust. It is accepted by all, princes as well as people, as a frank and open advance towards permanent friendship between Germany and Russia, and no suspicion of ulterior motives is entertained.

The Journal de St. Petersbourg gives utterance to all this feeling in an article welcoming the Emperor to Russia in sympathetic terms, and expressing the hope that the meeting of the Czar and Kaiser will be a fresh confirmation of universal peace.

The Russian fleet, with the Imperial vacht Deeshaya, is ready, with steam up, to go forth and meet the German squadron the instant its approach is signalled, Debute in the House of Commons on the Subject of Assisting Emigrants.

[BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.] LONDON, July 17.-There was a long de bate in the House of Commons last night on the clause of Local Government bill empowering county councils to advance money to emigrants.

Strong objection was raised by Radical members to local rates being applied to assisting emigration.

The Government agreed to restrict the operation of the clause to cases where a local or colonial guarantee for repayment would be given.

Mr. Samuel Smith proposed to authorize the councils to make grants in aid of the emigration of children. The Government sympathized with the object, but there were technical objections.

Railway officials yesterday. They recognized at once that they had a harder fight on their hands than has before been made against them.

It is not now a question of screening the system behind an innocent, overworked driver, but something of much more importance—whether they shall or shall not be de-clared felons and homicides under the law.

When This Evening World's announce-ment that its crusade was commenced was made the railroad corporation's counsel, Mr. George W. Connor, hastened to the Coroner's office to ascertain what steps had been taken to secure the indictment of its officials.

THE ACCUSED FIREMEN.

The Missing Messenger Boy Found, but He

The trial of Fireman William J. O'Connor was resumed this morning, the important feature of which was the appearance of the Mutual District messenger boy, whom Porter Little declared in his testimony had been asked by the firemen to take stolen collars and cuffs back to the Century Building.

At the appearance of this important witness a loud hum of surprise broke forth, which President Purroy stopped with his gavel, and shortly after the messenger boy, whose name is W. H. Farrell, was placed upon the stand, Farrell's testingny was clear and concise. Farrell's testimony was clear and concise. He was proceeding along Sixteenth street on the morning of July 7 when he saw a colored man walking and talking with two firemen. Although he could not hear their conversation he saw that they were excited.

He followed them until they came in front of a store, where one of the men went down in the basement.

As he approached the colored man asked him to run to the Century building and ask Mr. Wilson to come around at once. As the colored man made this request the fireman who had remained on the sidewalk started to run and the colored man at once gave chase.

After watching the pair for a few moments
he continued on his way to the office,
When asked to describe the men Farrell said that one was a large man, with a black mustache and side whiskers, while the other was a tall, slim man and smooth faced.
O'Connor and Keegan were brought forward, but Farrell declared that neither of

He had not spoken to the firemen, nor had they asked him to carry any bundle.

At the conclusion of Farrell's testimony, President Purroy announced that O'Connor's case was closed, and that the case of Keegan would then be taken up.

CONFUSION ON THE BRIDGE. A Runaway Horse, a Broken Wagon and

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, JULY 17, 1888.

Two Frightened Boys.

Shouts of alarm from foot passengers near the tower at the Brooklyn end of the bridge and a general rush for the parapet which overlooks the northerly carriage road were the first indications of an exciting runaway case this morning.

It was about 10, 30 o'clock and a light furniture wagon, with two boys in it, had driven in by the Sands street entrance at the Brooklyn side a few minutes previously.

The wagon was half full of bed springs and bore the name of Worth Brothers, of 107 Walker street.

Charlie Worth, son of the head of the firm, held the reins, and the other boy was his friend and companion.

The small bay horse attached to the wagon was rather spirited and he shied as he caught sight of the strange surroundings and the trains whizzing momentarily by.

The lads were inexperienced drivers, and when the horse bolted Charlie threw up the reins and both thought only of getting out.

The little bay rushed along the roadway at headlong speed, scattering the other vehicles in a surprising manner.

A heavy truck near the New York tower was slowly 'jogging along, and horse and wagon dashed into it.

The wagon got the worst of it. It was smashed in pieces, and the horse was badly cut. By little less than a miracle both lads were unhurt.

Haif an hour later another runaway accident occurred on the same track. The horse attached to a grocery wagon driven by George McGowan, who works for Edward Gallagher, of 76 Walker street, took fright.

McGowan, to save himself, steered his wagon against the New York tower. The horse broke loose and was captured while on the point of dashing into Park row by Officer Lauterborn. McGowan was unhurt.

A Jealous Negro Shoots His Former Paramour.

Jack Lewis Carries His Oft-Made Threats Into Execution.

Tragedy of This Morning in West Third Street-Lewis Talks Coolly of His Crime-How He Fortified Himself with Whiskey for the Job-The Woman Had Carried for a Year the Effects of an Old Wound from the Same Source.

The police of the rifteenth Precinct have a nurderer in their custody and the victim is in the St. Vincent Hospital morgue awaiting the action of the Coroner.

Jack Lewis, a colored man twenty-five years old, is the prisoner. He shot and killed his former paramour, Alice Jackson, this morning at 9.05 o'clock, in the hallway of the three-story brick building at 84 West Third street, where the girl was employed as Sing Sing. A few months ago they moved to New York and located on Grand street, near Wooster.

Jack says that Alice left him two months ago and went to live with another man. He has since been living at High Bridge, but has been doing no work.

This morning he met Alice near her house and walked with her on the pretense that he wanted his umbrella, which she had.

When they got into the hallway Lewis accused Alice of living with another man, and he says he reminded her of her threats to kill him if he ever lived with another woman.

The woman became frightened at his manner, and screamed "Murder!" at the top of her voice, when Lewis drew a revolver and shot her in the breast.

She turned and started to run, when he shot her again in the body and she fell bleeding and unconscious to the floor.

The woman's screams and the pistol shois aroused the whole neighborhood, and before Lewis could make his escape he was arrested.

An ambulance was summoned, and Alice rested.

An ambulance was summoned, and Alice Jackson, in a dying condition, was taken to St. Vincent's. She was unconscious, and died soou after reaching the hospital.

Lewis was taken to Jefferson Market Police Court and remanded by Justice Ford.

He talked freely about his cowardly deed and said he just wanted to "prick her a little."

Nearly a year ago, during one of his jealous fits, Lewis shot the woman and she was lame from the lead she carried in one of her legs. She then left him and tried to earn a living by acting as cook.

A week ago Lewis called at the West Third street house and had a stormy interview with Alice. He flourished a revolver and threatened to kill her unless she promised to be.

ened to kill her nuless she promised to be come his wife at once.

A policeman came in view then, and Alice appealed to him for protection, begging him to arrest either Jack or herself or both, as she felt certain that he would murder her.

The policeman took Jack into custody, led him as far as Thompson street and let him go, warning him if he returned to that neighborhood he would "Take him in."

This did not satisfy Alice, and on Saturday she went before a Police Justice and swore
